Dear Speaker Cutler and Majority Leader Benninghoff:

We write today urging you to call the Pennsylvania House of Representatives back into session before the end of this month to extend the opioid emergency declaration.

The opioid epidemic continues to ravage communities throughout our state. Last year, over 5,000 individuals died in Pennsylvania from overdose—a 16% increase from 2019. Each of those numbers represents a life cut short. Each represents families who will never be whole again.

Our districts include areas of Philadelphia hardest hit by the opioid crisis and substance use disorder. With the onset of the pandemic and the stay-at-home order issued last spring, 2020 is on track to be the worst year on record in Philadelphia for deaths from drug poisonings. Fatal overdoses were up 11% through three quarters, the latest information available, from just over 850 lives lost in 2019 to about 950 last year.

On January 10, 2018, Governor Tom Wolf declared a statewide disaster emergency because of the opioid epidemic, and he has continued to renew it since. He intends to renew this declaration again on August 5, 2021, but, with recent changes to the Pennsylvania Constitution, the renewal will expire on August 26, 2021, unless the Pennsylvania General Assembly votes to extend it.

The opioid emergency declaration has widened access to the prescription drug monitoring program, allowed agencies to share data, and made it easier for individuals to receive treatment. We have seen the positive effects and changed lives across our Districts. We have heard personal testimony that these programs work. It has been vital in our efforts to combat the scourge of opioid addiction. We, as elected representatives, need to do our part in ensuring this emergency declaration does not end prematurely.

Sincerely,
